Saira Terrazas Aims to Lead Brewer Volleyball's 2025 Turnaround with Skill and Leadership

The Brewer volleyball team is looking to bounce back from a tough 2024 campaign and Saira Terrazas is one of the players coach Jill Barkey will rely on to help lead the way.

The senior outside/setter was a first-team all-district selection this past season, and Barkey said she makes her presence felt on the court.

"Saira is an impact player," Barkey said. "We're a different team if she's not on the floor. She has played every position for me on the court, not just because of her skill in each position, but also because her game IQ is so high."

Barkey said Terrazas brings "a calm, but strong presence on the court and a mean arm swing."

Terrazas, 17, said the 2024 season was disappointing, but said she did like the fact that her (story continued on page 3) team competed throughout.

"As a whole, I was not completely satisfied with the season and our outcome," Terrazas said. "But I would say we put up a fight and kept up in some games that we were bound to lose."

The incoming senior said she had some definite objectives heading into 2024.

"My goal this past season was getting past 150 kills," Terrazas said. "But I was cut short of a couple games this year from an injury, which I didn't meet all the stats I wanted. But I got first-team (all-district), which was something I was shooting for."

A first-team all-academic team selection, Terrazas is also a member of the National Honor Society, Principles of Leadership, and plays Club Volleyball for FWFire.

The senior outside/setter she strives to fill a couple of roles on the team.

"I try to bring peace in the team, although I'm not one to be the most confrontational towards another person," Terrazas said. "I want them to know that I'm there with them, as well as trying to bring leadership to the team."

Terrazas said that in spite of the first-team all-district honor, she has faced some obstacles this season.

"Some challenges that I've had over the years of me playing is me getting in my head and putting myself down," Terrazas said. "How I've overcome this over the years is that I don't dwell on past points as much, and it's a game of mistakes which everyone makes. So I try and look to the next point."

Terrazas said something people would not know about her is that she is "a very outgoing and silly person that jokes around a lot" off the court.

"I feel like the way I play on the court in front of people is different than how I portray myself during practice," Terrazas said. "But over time I show more of myself with cheering, communication, and body language."

Barkey said she would like for Terrazas to work on a couple of things this off-season.

"While continuing to work on her offense on the net, I've asked her to really work on being a more vocal leader," Barkey said. "Saira is one of those players that leads by example but is less vocal. I want her to trust herself to lead her team. And I have no doubt that she can do that."

Backyard Science: Easy Experiments for Curious Kids

With school out and energy high, summer presents the perfect opportunity for kids to get outside and get curious. For families looking to balance fun with learning, backyard science experiments offer a simple, affordable way to keep young minds engaged, no screens or complicated equipment required.

Children are natural scientists. They ask questions, they explore, they test things. All you have to do is provide the space and the opportunity.

Here are five easy experiments parents and grandparents can do with kids using materials already found around the house or bought for just a few dollars. Each experiment focuses on a basic scientific principle, all while getting a little fresh air and sunshine.

Rainbow in a Jar

What You Need:

- Clear jar or drinking glass
- Water
- Sugar
- Food coloring
- Spoon

What to Do: Fill four small cups with warm water. Add increasing amounts of sugar to each (for example, 2 tablespoon, 4 tablespoon, 6 tablespoon, 8 tablespoon). Stir until dissolved, and color each cup a different color using food coloring.

Using a spoon, gently layer the most sugary water in the jar first, followed by the next most sugary, and so on. Pour slowly and carefully to keep the colors from mixing.

What They Learn: This teaches about density, the more sugar, the denser the liquid, which helps keep the layers separate.

DIY Volcano

What You Need:

- Baking soda
- Vinegar
- Dish soap
- Food coloring (optional)
- Small plastic container or paper cup

What to Do: Place a small container on the ground or inside a mound of dirt for a more dramatic look. Add 2 tbsp baking soda, a squirt of dish soap, and a few drops of food coloring. Pour in ½ cup vinegar and step back!

What They Learn: This simple chemical reaction creates carbon dioxide gas, showing kids what happens when an acid and a base combine.

Insect Investigators

What You Need:

- Notebook and pencil
- Magnifying glass (optional)
- Curiosity

What to Do: Spend 15 to 30 minutes quietly observing a small area of the yard. Have kids write down or draw every bug they see. Are the insects crawling, flying, hiding under leaves?

Older kids can take it a step further by researching their finds online or creating a "Field Guide to My Backyard."

What They Learn: Observation skills, insect identification, and the basics of entomology, the study of insects.

Solar Oven S'mores

What You Need:

- Pizza box or shoebox
- Aluminum foil
- Plastic wrap or clear plastic lid
- Tape
- Graham crackers, chocolate, marshmallows

What to Do: Line the inside of the box with foil, creating a flap on the lid to reflect sunlight inward. Place the s'mores ingredients on a foil "tray" inside the box, cover with plastic, and angle toward the sun. After 30–60 minutes in direct sunlight, the chocolate and marshmallow should melt.

What They Learn: This experiment teaches solar energy concepts and insulation techniques.

Water Walk

What You Need:

- Six clear cups
- Paper towels
- Food coloring
- Water

What to Do: Line up six cups. Fill cups 1, 3, and 5 halfway with water and add food coloring (red, yellow, blue). Leave cups 2, 4, and 6 empty. Fold paper towels into strips and connect them between each pair of cups. Over the next few hours, the water "walks" up the paper towels and mixes to form new colors in the empty cups.

What They Learn: Kids observe capillary action and color mixing, great for teaching both science and art.

And while these experiments are educational, they're also just plain fun, a chance to get messy, make predictions, and even eat a few gooey s'mores along the way.

Parents are encouraged to supervise and join in the fun. After all, a little curiosity and a backyard is all you need to spark a love of learning.

We'd love to see your backyard science fun! Share them with us on our Facebook, or email them to suburbannews@sbcglobal.net!

Summer Safety: Designate a Water Watcher

In a group setting, tragedies often occur because people assume someone else is supervising children in the water. Along with close and active supervision by parents or caregivers, designate a water watcher whose sole responsibility it is to supervise children during any in-water activity until the next person takes over.

An appropriate water watcher:

• Is at least 16 years of age (adults preferred).

• Has the skills, knowledge and the ability to recognize and rescue someone in distress or can immediately alert someone nearby who does or can.

• Knows CPR or can immediately alert someone nearby who can.

• Has a working phone to call for emergency help, which is typically 9-1-1.

• Has a floatation device and/or reaching object that can be used in a rescue.

• Is ALERT and not under the influence of drugs or alcohol, or distracted by texting, telephone, or talking to others or reading.

Make your own water watcher card to ensure that your water watcher is clearly identifiable to all. Rotate water watchers in designated periods of time, such as every 15 minutes. As water watchers rotate, pass the card to the new water watcher.

Go to redcross.org/waterwatchercard to make your own water watcher card.

Chain of Drowning Survival

A person who is drowning has the greatest chance of survival if these steps are followed:

• Recognize the signs of someone in trouble and shout for help.

• Rescue and remove the person from the water (without putting yourself in danger).

• Ask someone to call Emergency Medical Services (EMS). If alone, give 2 minutes of care, then call EMS.

• Begin rescue breathing and CPR.

• Use and AED if available and transfer care to advanced life support.

Instructions

1. Print this page on white card stock.
2. Cut along the dashed line.
3. Fold the card in half.
4. Protect the card by laminating it or inserting it in a plastic sleeve.
5. Punch a hole on the circle at the top of the card.
6. Attach a lanyard or tie yarn or a ribbon through the hole so it can be worn around the neck.
7. Ensure that the designated water watcher wears the card so they are clearly identifiable to all.
   - Rotate water watchers in designated periods of time, such as every 15 minutes.
   - The water watcher should not stop watching the activity in the water until the card has been passed to the next water watcher.

Texas History Minute by Dr. Ken Bridges

Rienzi Johnston: Civil War Drummer, Influential Editor, and Texas Senator with One of the Shortest U.S. Senate Terms

Rienzi Johnston was the powerful editor of The Houston Post, one of the state's most influential newspapers. Though mostly forgotten today, he was at one time one of the most widely read men in the state, and his words could make or break political careers. He led a life that brought him from a modest background in Georgia who ran away as a child to fight in the Civil War to becoming editor of one of the most influential newspapers in Texas. Along the way, he also embarked on one of the most unusual careers in the United States Senate.

Rienzi Melville Johnston was born in eastern Georgia in 1849 or 1850, but the records are not clear, and birth certificates were unheard of at the time. He was the oldest of four children, and his father was a printer. Johnston's family had deep roots in Georgia, including a great-grandfather who had fought in the American Revolution. He learned about printing at his father's side and became involved in the newspaper business from his earliest years.

When the Civil War erupted, he was still a child. At the age of 12 in 1862, he ran away from home and tried to enlist in the Confederate Army. Though officially the Confederacy would only take men over the age of 18, Civil War historians note that thousands of troops on both sides were underage. Realizing his young age, the army made him a drummer instead of putting him in the infantry or sending him home. He served for a year, was discharged, and then re-enlisted in 1864 for the remainder of the war. At the age of 14, he was already on his second tour of duty.

After his return to civilian life, he resumed his newspaper work. In 1870, Johnston moved to the busy port city of Savannah and became the city editor for the Savannah Morning News. In 1878, Johnston moved to Texas and secured a position as editor of the small Crockett Patron. His skills were in demand, and he moved to Corsicana the next year to serve as editor of the Corsicana Observer.

He soon branched out and started his own paper, the Independent. In 1880, he moved to Austin, where he secured a position with the Austin Statesman.

Meanwhile in Houston, a group of investors were attempting to revive the short-lived Houston Post. Johnston had already established a great reputation among Texas journalists, and he was hired as editor when it restarted in 1885. The Post soon became one of the most important papers in the state, mostly because of Johnston's writing and management of his newsroom. Johnston's editorials were routinely run in papers across the nation and quoted by politicians and businessmen. He often wrote impassioned defenses of the freedom of speech and freedom of the press as well as opinions of current events. In 1898, Texas Democrats offered to nominate him for lieutenant governor, but he declined.

In September 1912, Sen. Joe Bailey of Gainesville, wounded by accusations of corruption, announced his resignation from the Senate, effective Jan. 3, 1913. Gov. Oscar Colquitt appointed Johnston to fill out the remainder of the term, even though it would be only a few weeks. Johnston accepted and headed to Washington. There was very little activity in the Senate, and Johnston's term was largely uneventful.

His service ended on Jan. 29, replaced by the newly-elected Morris Sheppard of Texarkana, a popular congressman who would serve 28 years in the U.S. Senate.

Johnston's 25 days in the Senate was almost the shortest tenure of any Senator up to that time, certainly of any Texan. However, on Jan. 3, Sen. Jeff Davis of Arkansas died suddenly. Not to be outdone (or underdone), John Heiskell was appointed by the Arkansas governor to fill the position on Jan. 6. Heiskell, an influential newspaper editor like Johnston, also ended his service on Jan. 29, giving him 23 days in the Senate. Both men, however, far exceeded the ultimate record-holder on the shortest term: the 87-year-old Sen. Rebecca Latimer Felton of Georgia who served only one day in November 1922, becoming the first woman to serve in the Senate and the oldest person ever appointed to the position.

Johnston was not content exit politics entirely. In 1916, he was elected to the Texas State Senate, representing Harris County. He was elected as president pro tempore of the Senate in 1918, the highest-ranking member of the legislative body, second only to the lieutenant governor. He fully retired from The Houston Post in 1919, and in 1920, Gov. William P. Hobby appointed him to serve as head of the Texas Prison Commission. He continued to serve until his death in February 1926.

Decades later, the Houston Museum of Fine Arts named one of its buildings after him. The Houston Post, however, fell victim to the fierce competition of the Houston Chronicle and closed in 1995.

Internet Tips for Seniors: Staying Safe in a Digital World

From online banking to telehealth appointments, the internet has become an everyday tool for many North Texas seniors. But as digital access increases, so do the risks, with older adults frequently targeted by online scams, phishing attempts, and identity theft.

"Cybercriminals prey on trust, and unfortunately, our older population is often the most trusting," said Officer Lisa Ramirez of the Fort Worth Police Department's Cyber Crimes Unit. "We see cases weekly of seniors being defrauded out of hundreds or thousands of dollars."

In 2023 alone, the FBI's Internet Crime Complaint Center (IC3) reported over $3.4 billion in losses from online scams targeting Americans over the age of 60 — a staggering 84% increase from just five years ago. North Texas law enforcement and community groups are urging local seniors and their families to stay informed and take preventative steps.

Common Threats Facing Older Adults

Among the most common internet threats facing seniors are:

- Phishing Emails: These appear to be from trusted sources like banks, Medicare, or even family members. They often contain urgent messages asking the user to click a link or provide sensitive information.

- Tech Support Scams: A pop-up or phone call warns that the computer has a virus. The scammer convinces the victim to grant remote access or pay for fake services.

- Romance Scams: Targeting widowed or divorced seniors through social media or dating sites, scammers build emotional relationships before asking for money.

- Government Impersonation: Scammers pose as IRS, Social Security, or law enforcement officials, claiming overdue payments or legal trouble.

Practical Safety Tips

To combat rising threats, tech experts and local law enforcement recommend the following tips for seniors using the internet:

- Never Share Personal Information via email, text, or over the phone unless you are absolutely certain of the recipient's identity.

- Be Skeptical of Urgency, real companies and government agencies will not pressure you into immediate payment or action.

- Use Strong, Unique Passwords and change them regularly. Consider writing them down in a secure place or using a password manager.

Enable Two-Factor Authentication when available, especially for online banking, email, and shopping accounts.

- Hang Up on Suspicious Calls and never give remote access to your device unless you initiated the call with a trusted tech support provider.

- Keep Software Updated and install updates for your browser, computer, and mobile apps to protect against the latest threats.

Resources in the Community

North Texas seniors aren't alone in navigating online safety. Several area programs offer free classes, workshops, and one-on-one tech help:

White Settlement Senior Center hosts "Tech Tuesdays," where volunteers assist with devices and internet safety questions.

Tarrant County College offers free digital literacy courses for adults age 55 and up.

AARP Texas provides online webinars and printed guides specifically geared toward avoiding fraud and scams.

"We want seniors to feel empowered, not afraid," said Cross. "It's about building confidence. You don't have to be a computer expert to be safe online."

Families also play a crucial role in supporting older relatives. Experts suggest checking in regularly about unfamiliar emails or messages and encouraging open conversation without judgment.

Reporting Suspicious Activity

If you or a loved one suspects an online scam or fraud attempt, local authorities urge you to report it immediately: Fort Worth Police Non-Emergency Line: 817-392-4222 • Texas Attorney General's Consumer Protection Hotline: 1-800-621-0508 • FBI Internet Crime Complaint Center (IC3): www.ic3.gov.

For more internet safety resources, visit your local library or contact the Tarrant County Office on Aging at 817-531-5620.
