Brewer Sports Wrap Up

The Brewer boy's soccer team will open the playoffs tomorrow night with Fort Worth South Hills at 7 p.m. at Handley Field in Fort Worth, and coach Rafael Franco said is ready to roll.

"Practice went well this week," Franco said. "The boys trained hard and put in lots of effort."

The Bears finished with an overall record of 14-2-3 and Franco said for Brewer to have a good run in the playoffs, it will take a couple of things.

"Our team must play their best, make smart choices and more importantly play as a team," Franco said.

On the diamond, the Brewer baseball split their series with Wichita Falls Rider last week, and coach Gilbert Ramirez said his team played much better in their second game.

"I feel like we played nervous at the beginning of game one and it took us four innings to settle down," Ramirez said. "We battled back and were able to load the bases in the fifth and sixth innings, but it was a little too late against a really good team. I feel like we were in a much better mindset at the beginning of game two. It started out as a pitcher's duel but we were able to string some hits together and scored four in the top of the sixth inning to win the game".

Blayne Senger started the rally with a hit, Jake Ramirez followed with a hit and Jayden Ayala-Hinojosa tied the game with an RBI single.

Evan Laredo followed with the go-ahead RBI single and then Jesse Orozco hit a triple that scored two. Ayala Hinojosa pitched a complete game and only allowed one run on five hits.

Brewer lost the first game 10-3, but rebounded to take game two by a score of 4-1.

Brewer plays Aledo this week, and Ramirez said the Bearcats have a good program.

"We are expecting another tough series this week," Ramirez said. "We have an extremely tough district, but look forward to the challenges week in and week out."

In softball, the Lady Bears defeated Saginaw by a score of 11-7 last Tuesday, and coach Amye Guin said her team

"It was a total team effort, with 11 hits and one error in the field," Guin said. "Like we have talked about every team in this district is going to be fighting for a playoff spot and Saginaw was no different. We were happy with how we showed up offensively."

Blair Shipman picked up the win for Brewer, pitching 5 innings and allowing 4 hits and 4 runs.

Guin had strong games offensively from Savannah Frank, Karlie Landrum, Parker Pride and Arianna Hernandez.

Brewer lost to Aledo on Friday, and Guin said her team competed well.

"We had lots of great contact against a good defensive team," Guin said. "The balls just didn't fall our way and they played great defense behind their pitcher."

American Railroad Magnate - Jay Gould by Dr. Ken Bridges

The late 1800s was the age of the railroad. Trains steamed across the hills, valleys, and plains of a growing United States, steadily bringing distant communities closer together. Thousands of miles of track were laid down by thousands of men to build a rail network that brought people and goods from one end of the country to the other. One of the most important figures in Texas railroad development was business titan Jay Gould.

Born Jason Gould in Roxbury, New York, into a farming family in 1836, he grew to hate farming. As a result, his father, John Burr Gould, reportedly left him at a boarding school with 50 cents and a few changes of clothes. Gould, however, was a quick study with an aptitude for math. As a young man, he found work as an accountant and as a surveyor.

By 1859, he started investing heavily in railroads. After the Civil War, he concentrated on New York-area railways, earning impressive profits and steadily gaining more influence in the railroad industry. The Civil War had delayed railroad construction in the South, and Gould became determined to expand his holdings in the region, ultimately building lines from Missouri to Texas and west to Colorado. He formed the Texas and Pacific Railroad by an agreement with the state legislature in 1871. By 1873, he gained control of the powerful Erie Railway and the Union Pacific Railroad, taking advantage of financial crises and scandals surrounding both companies. In 1879, he took control of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, giving him effective control of one-sixth of the nation's rails.

As Gould looked west of the Mississippi River, he quickly moved to crush his rivals. Gould merged his many company interests and built hundreds of miles competing tracks across the region. The St. Louis Iron Mountain and Southern Railroad, in which Gould had heavily invested, had completed a line from St. Louis to the Texas border by this time. As the Texas and Pacific reached the Arkansas state line in 1873, he parceled out the land connected his railway with the Iron Mountain route and formed the city of Texarkana at the junction of the railroads and the state boundaries.

Gould would buy the St. Louis Iron Mountain and Southern Railroad in 1881 to more fully incorporate his Missouri Pacific network. Fort Worth would become an important terminus for his railroad as he pushed his railroad empire steadily westward. The Missouri Pacific would become a powerful force in locomotive passenger and freight traffic across the Southwest. In fact,

"MoPac," an acronym for the railroad, is a heavily-traveled road in Austin and was named for the railway. By the 1890s, Gould's companies promised passengers train travel from Chicago, Illinois, to California, through Texas, in just three days.

He would be responsible for the names of several cities across the nation as his railroads rolled through. Gouldsboro, Pennsylvania, was renamed for him. Gould, Ohio, was named after one of his railroad depots in 1881. Paragould, in the northeast corner of Arkansas, was named for Gould and Texas and St. Louis Railroad owner and rival J. W. Paramore when the town was founded at the intersections of their two routes in 1882.

Gould was both admired and hated in his day. He had become incredibly successful in the railroad industry, but his labor policies sparked some of the largest labor strikes in Texas History.

For all of his accomplishments in building railroads, he did not live a long life to enjoy it. Gould died of tuberculosis in New York City in 1892. Though railroads have declined in relative importance since his day, the railroad magnate put Texas and America on the path to the 20th century.
