Auxiliary Serves Up Crowd-Pleasing Fish Fry at VFW Post 10429

Ron Head and Post Chaplain John Berry (back) with Joann and Wayne Schuricht.

Good food and good company filled the hall Feb. 21 as the Auxiliary at VFW Post 10429 hosted its monthly fish fry.

Guests lined up for plates piled high with fried Thai catfish, French fries, hush puppies and coleslaw, a menu that has become a local favorite. The event drew a crowd of members and community residents who gathered for an evening of fellowship. Adding to the excitement, Will Glock took home this month's raffle basket prize.

Organizers called the evening another successful turnout, continuing a tradition that blends home-style cooking with community connection.

First Monday Quilt Club to Meet March 2

FWDP Meets

Monday, March 16

On the first Monday of every month, laughter, conversation and the steady hum of sewing machines fill Bethany Christian Church in White Settlement as volunteers gather not just to quilt, but to change lives.

The First Monday Quilt Club meets from 9 a.m. to noon at the church at 1500 Meadow Park Drive, bringing together volunteers who create handmade quilts and blankets for those who need comfort most.

The group's next meeting is set for Monday, March 2. Instead of a potluck lunch, participants are asked to bring brunch or snack items to share.

The club is part of Project Linus, a non-profit organization whose mission is to provide love, warmth and a sense of security to children who have experienced trauma, tragedy or serious illness.

Locally, the volunteers serve as the Tarrant County Chapter of Project Linus, creating blankets that are distributed to children throughout the area.

Their work does not stop there. The group also makes coverlets for veterans, nursing home residents and people experiencing homelessness. As needs in the community continue to grow, so does the demand for these handmade gifts of comfort.

Organizers say they are especially in need of volunteers with portable sewing machines to help assemble quilts, but stress that no experience is required.

"There is a place for everyone," organizers said. Volunteers can help by sewing, tying knots, crocheting, sorting fabric or simply lending a helping hand and good spirit. Along the way, many find not only a meaningful way to serve, but lasting friendships as well.

High school students can earn community service hours by participating, and all materials, including fabric, batting, thread and yarn, are provided. Donations of supplies or monetary contributions to help purchase materials are also welcome and appreciated.

Those interested are encouraged to come for the fellowship and stay for the joy of making a difference, one stitch at a time.

For more information about Project Linus and its mission, visit www.projectlinus.org.

“The game against Krum was a tough one for us, and credit to them for the way they competed,” Lofton said. “I was proud of our effort and the way our kids continued to fight, even when things didn’t go our way.”

Lofton said her team had stretches where it executed well and played with good energy, but there were a few other areas that did not go as well.

“Consistency hurt us, especially against a disciplined team like Krum,” Lofton said. “There were moments where we didn’t capitalize on opportunities or finish plays, and those small things add up at this level. Despite the result, I liked our competitiveness and the way the team stayed together. This game gave us a clear picture of what we need to improve as we move forward, and it will serve as a valuable learning experience for our team.”

And Benbrook was also rewarded with numerous all-district selections.

Grace Klaerner was selected as the District 8-4A Offensive Player of the Year and Guiliana Lucero and Mckinzie Brookshier were both first team all-district selections.

Klarissa Lomas and Maddy Blocker were named to the second team all-district squad, and Juliana Velasquez and Mareah Sainz were selected as honorable mentions in district 8-4A.

On the boy’s side, Benbrook wrapped up the regular season with a 65-39 loss to Southwest.

The Bobcats opened the post-season on Monday against Krum after the paper had already gone to press.

On the pitch, the Benbrook girls remain unbeaten in district following a 12-0 victory over Diamond Hill-Jarvis last Friday.

Over at Western Hills, the Lady Cougars made it five straight victories in district with a 4-0 win over the Young Women’s Leadership Academy last week.

On the boy’s side, Western Hills halted a four-game skid with a 7-0 win over the Young Men’s Leadership Academy on Friday night.

Over at Benbrook, the Bobcats defeated Diamond Hill-Jarvis by a score of 3-2 on Friday to remain firmly in the playoff hunt.

equipment as surplus and authorizing sale to Tarrant County Emergency Services District #1.

The resolution was adopted to declare the equipment surplus and for sale of the equipment in the amount of $30,000 unanimously.

Next was a resolution to adopt two street maintenance bills with Texas Bit.

The Street Maintenance Program is usually performed by the Tarrant County Road and Bridge Crew, but they are not able to complete all of the work the City of Benbrook is requesting.

The overlay portion would be completed by Texas Bit as part of an Interlocal Agreement with Dallas County, and the Milling, Reclaim and Striping portion would be completed as part of an Interlocal Agreement with Ellis County. The overlay would include portions of Mildred Lane, Vernon Castle Avenue and Winscott Road. The street maintenance contracts were awarded to Texas Bit in the amount of $2,152,165.46 unanimously.

Next up was a motion to consider approval of a Design Contract to Freese and Nichols for the Dutch Branch Park Improvements Project. Phases 1 and 2 will include front parking lot paving and lighting, an upgrade to the irrigation system, wayfinding signs, drainage improvements, restroom improvements, beacons for the low water crossing, rear parking lot paving and lighting and interior road and access travel. Phase 3 will be design only and constructed at a later date as budgets allow and include pavement for Andy Wayman Drive, tennis and pickleball parking lot pavement and pavement for the new parking lot for tennis and pickleball. The contract was approved unanimously in the amount of $888,000.

Time was then allowed for informal citizen comments, but there were none.

Time was then allowed for council member and staff comments, and member Renee Franklin reminded residents that the artisan market starts back up in March and thanked residents for being friendly to each other and supporting local businesses.

Council member Keith Tiner then thanked the first responders for their efforts during the inclement weather experienced late last month. The meeting was then adjourned.

Texas History Minute by Dr. Ken Bridges

Pulaski's Legacy Endures as Nation Marks 250th Anniversary

As the nation prepares for the 250th anniversary of independence, Americans look with renewed interest to the lives of men and women from the Revolutionary Era. Among those was Count Casimir Pulaski, a man who came across the seas to aid the new United States in its hour of need. The Polish general arrived in the United States during the American Revolution, trained American troops, and gave his life for the freedom of the new land. Pulaski became a hero for the generation of men who fought for American independence.

Casimir Pulaski was born in March 1746 in Warsaw, the capital of what was then the Confederation of Poland and Lithuania. His family was part of the Polish nobility, and his family made sure he received the best education. In 1762, at the age of 16, he entered the military, serving as an aide to the Duke of Courland, a prestigious posting.

Poland had once been the most powerful nation in East Europe; but now its power was on the decline, and it was under increasing threat from Russia. In 1764, King Stanislaw II came to power in Poland, and Russia increasingly worked its tendrils into the country, eventually forcing Poland to allow Russian troops to be stationed there. Believing that Russia must be stopped and that the new king was betraying the country, Pulaski and his father joined the Bar Confederation in 1767 to fight against Russia, in defiance of the king. Though only 21, Pulaski was made a colonel in charge of a cavalry unit and worked to convince other Polish troops to join their cause against Russia.

By early 1768, Pulaski and the Bar Confederation were fighting both Russian troops and the Polish king's army. He won several impressive victories at first. By June, he was briefly captured by the Russians but later exchanged for another captive. He quickly developed a reputation for daring raids and sometimes disobeying orders when he saw a bigger military opportunity. He won several battles against more numerous Russian forces and earned a respected reputation across Europe. Eventually, he was promoted to general. However, in spite of several dramatic victories and surviving several long sieges, the Bar Confederation was steadily losing ground. In May 1772, Pulaski was forced to leave Poland, and the effort against Russia collapsed. Russia would seize a third of Poland's territory, the first of several partitions of the country.

Russia forced King Stanislaw II to order his parliament to ratify the partition of Poland in 1772. Several months later, Pulaski was convicted by the assembly for attempting to assassinate the king. Eventually, Russia would swallow all of Poland. In the meantime, Pulaski was on the run.

Pulaski was in France by 1775. His attempt to join the French army was rejected, and he fell deeply into debt. At one point, he was imprisoned for failure to pay these debts. In 1777, he met Ben Franklin, who was then serving as ambassador to France. Pulaski was inspired by the American cause of freedom against a more powerful foe. Impressed by Pulaski's experience, Franklin encouraged the general to go to America.

In July 1777, Pulaski arrived in Massachusetts. He presented himself in a letter to Gen. George Washington, famously declaring, "I came here, where freedom is being defended, to serve it, and to live and die for it." He joined Washington in Pennsylvania and quickly began advising Washington on new cavalry tactics. At the Battle of Brandywine in September, Washington's forces were being overwhelmed, and the British were about to cut off the American retreat. Pulaski leapt into action, gathered a few of Washington's men, and led a daring cavalry charge to broke through the British advance, allowing the faltering Continental troops to get to safety.

During the bitter winter at Valley Forge in 1777, Washington allowed Pulaski to reorganize the cavalry forces for the Continental Army. Pulaski often clashed with other officers. His European command style and difficulty speaking English made it difficult to lead American troops. By 1778, he was promoted to brigadier general in the Continental Army and allowed to form his own cavalry unit. He soon had a unit of hundreds of men, both immigrant and American-born. He was known for his strict discipline but also for clever tactics that even won the grudging respect of British generals. Military historians have since credited Pulaski with the birth of the American cavalry.

By May 1779, Charleston, South Carolina, was on the brink of capture by the British. Pulaski arrived and decided to break the siege of Charleston by leading a raid on nearby Savannah, Georgia, which had fallen a year earlier. His attempt pushed back the British but cost many of his fellow cavalymen. Nevertheless, they managed to capture a nearby British outpost. In October, with the arrival of French reinforcements, Pulaski decided to try to retake Savannah once again. Again, they met heavy resistance. The French lines broke during the battle, and Pulaski rode to rally the troops. In the chaos, he was cut down by British fire. He died two days later at age 33.

Seven states have named counties after him, including Georgia, Missouri, Arkansas, and Virginia. He has been honored in many other ways.

In 1824, the Marquis de Lafayette, the French general who had fought with American forces during the American Revolution and one of the last surviving generals from the war, laid the cornerstone for the Pulaski Monument in Savannah.

The former community of Pulaski in Panola County was named for him in the 1840s. In 1929, Congress named October 11 as General Pulaski Memorial Day.

In 2009, he was posthumously made a United States citizen, one of only a handful of people so honored.
