Brewer Baseball Bears Beat Wichita Falls; Softball Lady Bears are 4-1 in District; Varsity Cheerleaders Named to All-State Team

The Brewer baseball team went 1-1 this past week against Wichita Falls, defeating the Coyotes by a score of 9-1 on Friday to avenge a 17-7 loss last Tuesday.

Coach Gilbert Ramirez said his team continues to make progress.

"I thought we came out a little flat on Tuesday at Wichita Falls," Ramirez said. "We did a good job of getting back in the game, but it just wasn't our day. We played much better on Friday and had another great pitching performance from Trey Ramirez.

Evan Laredo went 3-6 with a home run in the series, while Colby Jenkins went 3-5 and Ricardo Martinez was 4-6 with a home run. Kadin Gehring went 4-7, and on the mound, Trey Ramirez had 6 innings pitched with 5 strikeouts.

The Bears followed the series split up with a 4-3 victory over Haltom on Saturday. Jayden Ayala-Hinojosa threw 6.2 innings with 5 strikeouts, while Jeremy Johnson got the save with the bases loaded. Jessie Orozco was 3-4 with 2 RBI and Jenkins was 2-3 with an RBI and Louis Castoreno was 2-3 with an RBI.

"I thought we played really well today against a good Haltom team," Ramirez said on Saturday. "Jayden pitched a great game and our hitters had several hard hit balls into the wind today. Proud of how we bounced back and have now won five of our last seven games."

On the softball diamond, the Lady Bears improved to 4-1 in district competition last Tuesday with a 6-0 victory over Wichita Falls Rider.

Kaymie Chandler led the way offensively for Brewer, going 2-3 with two home runs and 3 RBI, and (continued on page 4)

Lena Pope Home CEO Dr. Ashley Elgin (left) accepted the Women in American History Award honoring founder Lena Pope presented by Chapter Honorary Regent Gwen Boyd on March 17.

Mary Isham Keith Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution recently presented the prestigious Women in American History Award to Lena Pope for her outstanding work in the 1930 founding and long-time management of the Lena Pope Home for dependent, neglected and homeless children.

“It is our chapter’s great honor to recognize the work of this outstanding award winner who was a member of our DAR chapter,” said Honorary Chapter Regent Gwen Boyd. “It’s critical for organizations such as the DAR to pause and celebrate the work of citizens and their community contributions. The future of our community is dependent on the service and efforts put in by its residents such as Mrs. Pope. Our DAR chapter is grateful for this inspiring winner. We have been honoring her counterparts in this community for many years and it is fitting that she receive this recognition.”

Tips to Spring Clean Your Personal Finances

Tax season is in full swing, and the IRS has processed and delivered more than $1 billion in refunds so far this year. Whether you’re receiving a tax refund or not, now may be the perfect time to spring clean your personal finances. Here are a few ways to get started:

- Save those extra funds: Studies show the latest tax refund trends are using the influx towards paying down debt and setting it aside to save up for large purchases like a car or home. To get in on the trend, start by tracking your monthly expenses and categorizing each expense as a want or a need. Avoid using a credit card if you are unable to pay the balance each month to avoid interest charges, and make a plan to pay off any outstanding debt. Financial experts recommend having an emergency fund covering three to six months of living expenses if you can. If not, start with an emergency fund goal of $1,000.

- Get invested: Investing can be the best way to grow your financial portfolio. According to a recent study from MagnifyMoney, more than three-quarters of millennials wish they would have started investing earlier. The main factors that respondents cited preventing them from investing are lack of knowledge, feeling intimidated and feeling overwhelmed about where to start. There is hope and help – many financial institutions offer free online workshops and opportunities to work with an advisor to help guide you through your financial future.

- Reassess monthly bills and spending habits: Now is a great time to review your monthly expenses and see what you can adjust or live without. Simple changes like cutting down on eating out or canceling subscriptions you don’t use can have a large impact. Shopping around for homeowner’s or car insurance is also a great way to secure some extra savings. Phone plans and home internet bills are other must-have services to shop for price comparisons and savings.

- Treat yourself: Spoiling yourself from time to time is not a bad thing, in fact, studies from the American Psychological Association have shown it to be a good boost to your overall mental health. Consider using a portion of your refund to upgrade your smartphone, take a trip to a new destination, treat someone special in your life or donate to one of your favorite organizations, because you only live once.

However you plan to use your tax refund or set finance goals this year, make a plan and stay consistent.

The Great Southwest Railroad Strike of 1886

“Another day, another dollar” was a saying that became popular in the late 1800s. Many workers made only 10 cents per hour for a 10-hour work day. With difficult and dangerous work to perform for little pay, tensions rose between workers and their bosses. Labor unions emerged as workers sought to speak out. Arguments with management, however, erupted into full-scale wars. In 1886, railroad titan Jay Gould faced off a union called the Knights of Labor. The result was the Great Southwest Railroad Strike, the largest strike in Texas history.

In his 30 years in business, Jay Gould had risen from poverty to becoming one of the richest men in the country. By 1886, Gould owned 15 percent of all railroad tracks in the country – one mile out of every seven. The Knights of Labor had arisen promising to transform the landscape for workers, calling for equal pay for all races and for women, an end to child labor, an end to convict labor, and an 8-hour work day. These ideas would not come to fruition for American workers for decades.

The union launched a strike against Gould the year before and was promised a pay raise and protection for union activities in a new contract. The company signed the agreement, but Gould had no intention of honoring it. He sat back and plotted his revenge. In the meantime, union membership surged. Nationally, numbers passed 700,000 for the Knights of Labor, including at least 30,000 in Texas. Gould had spent years building a railroad empire and refused to answer to anyone while thousands of workers insisted they should have a voice in the company and a share in the success their work built. Gould was willing to risk everything and pay any price to defeat the union. Workers decided that they would be pushed no longer. The contest of wills soon began.

By early 1886, many of Gould’s Texas workers began seeing pay cuts instead of the raises they were promised. In February, a union leader in Marshall was fired by the railroad for attending a union meeting. On March 1, the Knights of Labor voted to strike after regional leader Martin Irons, a Scottish immigrant, called for a response. Within days, more than 200,000 rail workers in five states went on strike. Several other rail unions refused to join the strike, but strikers quickly hit the heart of Gould’s empire. The strike spread to Arkansas, Kansas, Illinois, and Missouri, stopping most transcontinental rail traffic.

Gould hired new workers to replace the strikers and strikebreakers to protect the rail yards and to confront workers. Strikebreakers were used often to physically intimidate strikers, using everything from fistfights to rifles and shotguns. Workers often responded in kind. As the strike wore on, increasing numbers of incidents were reported across the state and the entire country.

Texarkana, a city founded by the railroads, erupted into chaos as the strike began. With the railroads shut down, local businesses suffered. Groups calling themselves “law and order leagues” stormed the rail yards and seized control of them from the strikers. On April 3, violence erupted in Fort Worth. Strikers clashed with strikebreakers. Tarrant County sheriff’s deputies were called out to restore order, but one deputy was killed and two others injured in the process.

Determined to gain the upper hand, Gould decided to overpower strikers on the streets and in public opinion. He contacted one governor after another in the affected states asking for support. One after another, governors called up their state militias to confront the strikers. Texas Gov. John Ireland also agreed, sending state militia troops to Fort Worth to maintain order and Texas Rangers elsewhere to disrupt the strike. Workers sabotaged engines and rail lines. As the strike continued, workers faced an increasingly angry public that blamed them for the violence. By May, the union voted to end the strike, with no concessions from Gould at all.

Gould died in 1892, with control of his railroads intact. Irons himself was blacklisted and drifted from job to job under assumed names. He ultimately settled in Bruceville, not far from Waco, and spent years afterward speaking to unions. Both men have monuments to them; a church was renamed for Gould in New York City while a historic marker is at Irons’s grave in McLennan County.

The violence of the railroad strike, coupled with the notorious Haymarket Riot in Chicago later that year that left nearly a dozen dead in clashes between laborers and police devastated the cause of organized labor. Public opinion turned sharply against workers. The Knights of Labor was torn apart in the aftermath as accusations of who to blame raged back and forth and workers abandoned the organization. By 1890, more than 90 percent of its membership had left, and the organization collapsed.

As part of the American Rescue Plan, some Tarrant County property owners can apply for assistance with delinquent property taxes.
